Dear Friends

I realise we are already a quarter of the way through this year where our focus has been charting the way ahead. I strongly believe this is a year where the Holy Spirit is breathing new life into us, inspiring us to move forward.

However, we all face the tension between that which is not yet, and the now we are living in. We look at where we are right now at this moment, and although having a desire to move forward, there are difficulties that we must address and overcome. These can be from situations arising in our personal lives, or within relationships, or in connection with our missional outlook.

In our personal lives, this is a year to be healed, to be made whole. Any area of woundedness will affect the way we radiate light. We are lighthouses offering vital direction to others as we ourselves chart a course ahead. As a lighthouse needs a clear ray of light, we need to be healed up otherwise our “light” may disperse through the cracks of brokenness and result in spilling in disarray, without distinction, clarity or direction.

The fruit of healing and wholeness will overflow into our relationships, bringing us into divine alignment with God’s order. Look at Luke 5:4-7. There are primary and secondary relationships evidenced here. Our primary relationship is being aligned with Jesus Christ, sure in the knowledge of our union with Him; but our secondary alignment is knowing those we are called to be in relationship with. In verse 7 of this chapter, Peter calls for those who they were partnering with to work together and thus enable the whole catch of fish to be landed. This is also the year for relational alignment as we leave behind all tendencies towards isolation and independence.

With regards to our missional call, we must refocus on the two-fold purpose of why the church exists: firstly to be a called-out, gathered, worshipping community enjoying the presence of God and secondly to impact and influence our communities, seeing lives transformed by the power of the Holy Spirit. The tension between gathered and sent need not be viewed as a hindrance, a sandbank or iceberg, but a means whereby we move into a new administration of His power as we come under His authority.

Let’s see more of His kingdom come as we move ahead in these coming months.

I trust you will enjoy the articles in this issue as much as I have: they are packed with insight and wisdom. Look up the Conferences and Equipping Weekends, as I have sought to bring together men and women who carry a clear message to help us realise more of the ‘not yet’ in the kingdom now!

Blessings,
Trevor

Trevor Baker and his wife, Sharon, are the founders and senior leaders of Revival Fires, and have established an Apostolic Resource Centre in Dudley, England. Trevor pastors a growing local church (Church at the ARC), hosts conferences and equipping schools, and invests in church leadership through Revival Legacy. He travels internationally as a conference speaker and leads mass evangelism in India; where he has seen over 100,000 saved and set-up feeding programmes, disaster relief and Papa’s House to reach children living in poverty.
India Update from Judith Williamson

Judith Williamson, our Partners Co-ordinator, sent us this update while at Papa’s House, which is Revival Fires and Holy Word Ministries’ orphanage, in Siliguri in North East India. She spent time in April with our Revival Children and also making preparations for our upcoming mass-evangelism crusade meetings - find out how you can be a part of it on page 15.

Hello from Siliguri

Judith Williamson, our Partners Co-ordinator, sent us this update while at Papa’s House, which is Revival Fires and Holy Word Ministries’ orphanage, in Siliguri in North East India. She spent time in April with our Revival Children and also making preparations for our upcoming mass-evangelism crusade meetings - find out how you can be a part of it on page 15.

I’m at Papa’s House now, the children are in good health - except for a few bruises from playing cricket too dangerously! Cricket fever is still running high and every break time everyone rushes for the bat and ball and displays a great deal of passion!

I’ve been encouraged so far to see how things are here with the children generally. They seem very happy and contented. Some are even helping out in church meetings now, sharing the word and leading worship, and they all prayed for the those who were sick. Each Sunday they share testimony of healings at Benjamin’s church.

There are sponsors letters up on the notice board. There is a quiet but real sense of God’s presence and peace here, and there is a general feeling of God’s abundant life slowly but surely trickling in and taking root, changing attitudes and building on an already great foundation of love.

For the rest of the time here I am going to work on some sponsors letters with the children and getting plenty of photos in stock for the next few months of updates.

We are going over to Kalchini tomorrow to have a look at the ground and facilities for the crusade and to meet with one or two other leaders and the follow up teams. We are asking partners to continue to cover all these preparations in prayer.

I am going out just now to take all the girls for ice cream and apparently the escalator at Cosmos shopping centre will also make them very happy! Simple pleasures!

With love,
Jude
Recover the King’s Speech

Lance Wallnau

As this issue is focused on ‘Sandbanks and Icebergs’ and themed around the obstacles that we face as we chart the way ahead, I would like to share a big-picture perspective on challenges faced by believers in our day, and the immediate opportunity in England as we position ourselves for breakthrough.

I was awakened to the unique moment that is coming upon England.

The impression is still fresh in my mind as I recently returned from a whirlwind tour of England and Amsterdam where I conducted meetings and interviewed leaders in Watford, Oxford, Leeds, Dudley and Southampton. While in Dudley with Pastor Trevor, I was awakened to the unique moment that is coming upon England. Prior to my visit, I had predicted that the movie “The King’s Speech” would win the Academy Awards for Best Picture of the year - and much to my relief it did just that. The movie captures the story of King George VI of Britain, his impromptu ascension to the throne and the speech therapist who helped the unsure monarch find his voice, even as Hitler was mesmerising Germany with his own.

I felt that The King’s Speech is both a movie and a sign that England is about to recover its voice in the world as the church takes up its role as the unconventional therapist.

On the flight to Heathrow, I was studying a recent speech delivered by Prime Minister David Cameron in Munich. According to the article in Associated Press, Cameron warned - “Europe must stamp out intolerance of Western values within its own Muslim communities and far-right groups if it is to defeat the roots of terrorism.” Cameron told the annual Munich Security Conference that European governments have been too tolerant of some sectors of society that publicly oppose democracy. Britain found that many convicted terrorists had initially been influenced by so-called “nonviolent extremists” – people who aren’t involved in encouraging plots, but denounce western politics and culture – before going on to carry out violence. “We won’t defeat terrorism simply by the actions we take outside our borders. Europe needs to wake up to what is happening in our own countries,” Cameron told the conference.

Both Britain and Germany have had noisy domestic debates about the impact of immigration, and the difficulties of integrating some religious communities, or those who struggle with the language of their new home. In an attack on Britain’s previous government, Cameron said authorities there had been too hesitant to intervene when some sectors of society espoused abhorrent views. “We have even tolerated these segregated communities behaving in ways that run counter to our values,” Cameron said. “We have encouraged different cultures to live separate lives, apart from each other and the mainstream.”

Cameron said a culture of tolerance had allowed both Islamic extremists, and far-right extremists, to build support for their causes. “We’ve been too cautious, frankly even fearful, to stand up to them.”

The problem with Great Britain is that it has difficulty defining what exactly British culture is. Here is where the King must recover his voice. The story of England is an often-bloody one that frequently traces the conflicts between Catholic and Protestant thrones. It is a battle over the exercise of Christian faith that marks England is about to recover its voice in the world.

Europe and England in particular owes the richness of its culture and the inclusiveness of its institutions to the influence of uncompromising reformers who illuminated their countries - often by the light of their own bodies as they were burned at the stake.

The martyrs landscape all over the great country. The influence of Christianity in the formation of western civilization and its laws, literature, commerce, arts and institutions is a fact that embarrasses the secular elites who lead contemporary Europe. They have forgotten what helped form the culture they now prize. Yet Europe and England in particular owe the richness of its culture and the inclusiveness of its institutions to the influence of uncompromising reformers who illuminated their countries - often by the light of their own bodies as they were burned at the stake.

One cannot help but be befuddled at how modern day politicians and media pundits are stammering to define what exactly the “culture” is that they hope immigrants practicing Islam should become part of. This is where they admit they are stuck. What exactly is Great Britain?

After visiting one of Oxford’s senior professors, I found myself a few yards from the campus and standing at the historic site where Bishops Latimer and Ridley were burned alive together. It was at this place where Latimer is quoted as having said to Ridley: “Be of good comfort, master Ridley, and play the man; we shall this day light such a candle, by God’s grace, in England, as I trust shall never be put out.”

Here were men who served in Kings courts, taught in hallowed universities and died as servants to the
The word that describes a phase of maturity in the call of Christ where a believer enters the season in God’s word is called “convergence.” Convergence is the technical term used to describe a phase of ministry life referred to as “convergence.” Men like this can be seen in the faces of Wesley and Whitfield, two sons of Oxford. They are also seen in the tireless exertions of William Booth and discerned in the bent frame of that great Statesman of Parliament, William Wilberforce. These represent the individuals, male and female, who reach a certain phase of ministry life referred to as “convergence.”

When secular leaders will not or cannot be found, I believe that believers in England will now begin to rise up and cross the chasm into Muslim communities and begin a new type of dialogue that will show the prototype will come from a city where the concentration of Islam is 14% of the population - in contrast to the national average of 4%. The solution will be worked out and refined in Dudley.

The world needs England to speak once again with Churchillian clarity...and I see a generation of believers being positioned in England to do just that!

One day my husband, Rolland, was flying me in our little bush plane over a particular area in our nation of Mozambique. I noticed that there were no roads. I asked Rolland to take me as low as the plane could possibly go and as I looked down, I saw village after village below me. I started sobbing. I was sobbing because there were no roads, and there was no way in the natural that I could get to those people. I was weeping, because I have read The Book, and I know My God! I can’t imagine anyone on this planet not getting the opportunity to know this beautiful Saviour. I can’t imagine them not getting the chance. I began to weep and I asked God what I should do? And He said, “Get a boat!” So we prayed and believed for the boat.

For two years I was told how impossible it was to get a boat. We got a boat! Everybody needs to know! Every tribe, every nation, every tongue! I am a woman possessed by His heart for the lost. Holy possessed by the one I love; I must be a dingy in the world somewhere! I had seen them!

Two years and ten days for the boat to finally get here. When we got to the village, first by boat and then by dingy, everyone came running to us! I told them that I had come with good news! I shared every word that I knew in their tribal tongue of Makua. They had never heard the name of Jesus before that day. We sat in a little carpenter’s shop, which consisted of a few sticks and a ripped piece of plastic, and shared about Jesus while they were making local furniture. Everyone came! I shared, I sang and I gave them some little solar powered audio New Testaments in Makua. When I asked them who wanted to receive Jesus, everyone said yes!

What if we would have stopped short? What if we would have given up? Do not be stopped by difficulty! Never stop short of what God has promised you! He has a destiny for you.

A few months later we went back to this little village and even before I had the chance to get out of the dingy, the whole village ran to me singing songs and quoting scripture that they had memorised from the solar Bibles! What a joy! God has made Himself known to a village, which had been totally forgotten by the outside world. We are now in the process of building the first ever school and church in this village.

What a privilege we have to share the gospel about Christ Jesus. Oh thank you Jesus! We get to be part of bringing people into His presence! We get to give our little lives. Without Him we are just dry twigs. But He calls us to fruitfulness, to intimacy and to fearless, tenacious love. It costs, yet we count it all joy!
